In the tunnel, Mary was looking for her robot. She couldn't understand why this was happening. Mary was worried for her robot; tears were running down her face. She was crying, her creation was in a dangerous location and she couldn't find it. The minutes were passing by so fast, and when Mary finally could see the metal body of her robot, she ran to it. Its red's light was turning off slowly.

Mary was desperate and she tried to turn the robot on. One minute, two minutes, three minutes... the clock was ticking dangerously, and the tunnel was filled of smoke, so she couldn't breathe well.

When she finally managed to turn the robot on, she fell down. Her creation saw the dummy at a distance from where it stood. It knew that it had to save the dummy, but then, the robot saw Mary.

It knew that the real victim in that situation was the woman, so it reported their location, and suddenly, a little light on the screen caught the attention of the firefighters who were coming in their direction. Some minutes later, Mary was outside the tunnel.

The robot 15 won the competition. It had saved its creator, and then it saved the dummy as well!
